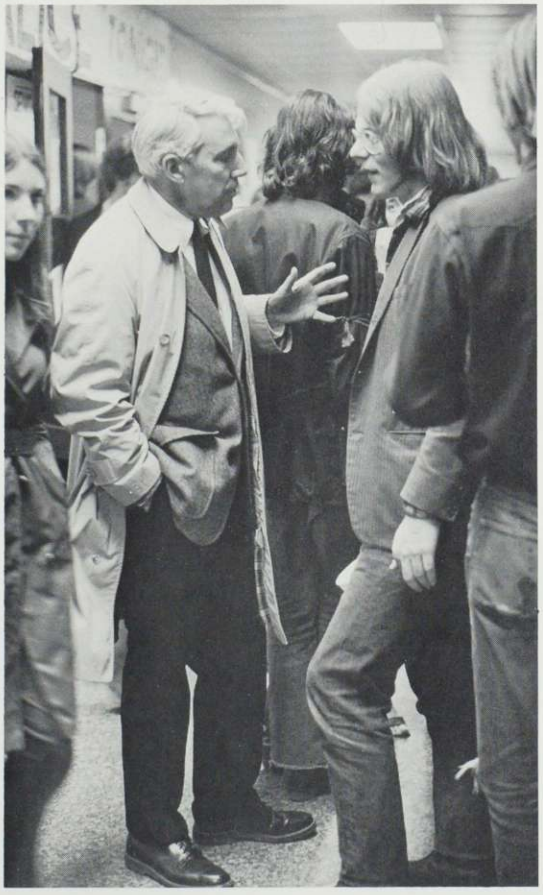
" 'That's one thing we learned about. Well, like take peace, the main thing. Most people think that all it means is peace between nations. But, you see, you can't have peace between nations until you have peace between people, me and you. And we can't have peace with each other until each of us has peace with himself.' "

Obie Benz

The Campus October 2, 1970

"Let us forget these differences which so often seem so artificial—which may be all very well in more secure times—these differences which divide us in an age in which divisiveness is being fostered by so many people in positions of authority."

Nicholas Clifford
May 5, 1970



1963

"What happens to the student at Middlebury is what ultimately counts the most."

1964

"Our most important single effort will be to maintain and strengthen the human base of the College."

1965

"We must adapt—we must have new energy, new facilities—but we must also preserve the basic values of liberal learning—a cause fundamental to the freedom of men's mind and the living of life with integrity, intelligence and good will."

1966

"The College itself must have its values, its own conscience beyond self interest, and its role to educate, not indoctrinate; to nurture thought which will be translated into action; to create a context for learning which is open and flexible, not narrow and rigid."

1970

"Middlebury College has not seen the massive and tragic disruptions that have convulsed or halted great institutions of learning. Yet we have had enough experience in recent years to feel deeply our vulnerability."

To a class of entering students:

"If you are tempted soon to think that the old guard is so entrenched that change will never be possible, you should know that the College is ever changing, but tries to hold a steady course."

Talking with Paul Paletti and Rick Hathaway while pictures were being taken:

"I sometimes go up to the Crest Room alone for a cup of coffee, . . . or walk around campus hoping that students will come up to me and just talk."

" 'That's what it's all about, man. Aches and pains is the name of the game."

"There's a slight stigma attached, for some people. They tend to shy away if you open a conversation by saying, "I'm a football player". But I think it's worth it.' "
